

TRADITIONAL SCOTTISH MUSIC

“the perfect blend of harp and voice”

Debbie Brewin-Wilson

*Scottish music traditionalist,
Singer-songwriter and harper*

Debbie Brewin-Wilson has been performing festivals, concerts and coffeehouse venues throughout the Northeastern United States for more than a dozen years. She has a rich, expressive voice that is perfectly complemented by her harp. Besides being well-steeped in traditional Scottish music, she performs her own songs which bring a fresh perspective to that heritage as well as many of life's journeys.

Debbie has a wide repertoire of traditional centuries-old Scots ballads and songs, many in Scots Gaelic. She has a special affinity for the songs of Scotland's noted poet Robert Burns, and besides using these songs in performances, she also has compiled a music book of harp arrangements of Burns music and has presented workshops on this topic. Not only does she accompany her singing on the harp, but Debbie adds the Scottish jigs, reels, and strathspeys, to her performances as well.

Debbie can perform her music for all ages and has done programs for schools and libraries, folk music venues, all the way up to senior citizen groups.
